Why the political power and money game?

THE PNG Constitution, just like any other written constitution, is a political document that has the force of law.

You can compare our constitution with the Book of Genesis.

Where Genesis is all about creation of the world, our constitution is firstly about creation of a nation, and how the nation must conduct its business of government. In effect the constitution is a code of rules.

Let us take the game of soccer for instance. In a soccer game, there is the referee, who controls the game to ensure that the game is played by the rules. In our case as a nation, we have the judges who play basically similar roles as the referee. And whereas the referee is there to ensure that the soccer players comply with the rules of the soccer game, our judges are there to ensure that we the people conduct ourselves in the manner stipulated by the law.

What has happened to our nation just recently, is that we have two groups of politicians each claiming that it is the lawful government of Papua New Guinea.

Sir Michael's group was ousted by Parliament on 2/8/11 and a new Prime Minister was elected thus giving creating the second group, namely, the O'Neill-Namah group. Following that event, the Somare Group took the matter to the Supreme Court and asked the Court to decide if what Parliament did on 2/8/11 was constitutional or unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court Application was filed on 5/8/11 and all the parties to the case concluded their submissions or arguments on the 28/10/11. And the Court was adjourned to 9/12/11 for the five senior judges to make their decision or ruling. Thus, by the time the decision was handed down on 12/12/11 the O'Neill-Namah government had been in power for over 4 months.

The Supreme Court ruled that the lawful Prime Minister was Sir Michael Somare. And the Court also ruled that Peter O'Neill's appointment was unconstitutional. The Court was split 3 in favour of Sir Michael and 2 against. The 2 judges against Sir Michael are Gibbs Salika, the Deputy Chief Justice, and Bernard Sakora, a Senior Judge.

Salika DCJ argued that the NEC was largely at fault in keeping Parliament and the public at large in suspense over the matter of Sir Michael's health so what Parliament did on the 2/8/11 was somewhat justifiable. His Honour did not attend to the legal issues raised in the Application. Rather His Honour's decision is more like the political views expressed by the O'Neill-Namah group. Had his Honour concentrated strictly on the legal issues raised, he would have come to the same conclusion as the other 3 judges.

And as for Judge Sakora, his argument was largely that the events of 2/8/11 had come and gone and a new order was in place so that the Court should not dwell on the events of 2/8/11, but look beyond that to recognize the new order of things, namely, that there is a new government in place. Thus, he relied on the legal principle of state necessity to allow the new government to remain in power.

Thus, judge Sakora said this has happened in some African countries and Pakistan where a illegal government takes over power and the legal system accommodates that government because the new government is in effective control of the institution of state and the machinery of government.

Again Sakora J did not attend to the legal issues raised in the Application. He appeared to have glossed over the issues and concentrated on justification for allowing the new regime to remain in power. Had he concentrated on the legal issues, he would have come to the same conclusion as the other three judges, Injia CJ, Gavara-Nanu J, and Kirriwon J.

The above three judges concentrated on the legal issues raised namely, whether the creation of a vacancy in the Office of the PM was in compliance with the constitution, and secondly, whether the appointment of Peter O'Neill as the new PM was also in compliance with the Constitution. And on both these issues the three judges made the ruling that Parliament had no power under the constitution to create a vacancy in the Office of the PM where there is an existing PM and in his absence, there is a lawfully-appointed Acting PM, therefore the appointment of Peter O'Neill was null and void and of no legal force and effect.

However, the final orders issued by the Supreme Court was the orders of the Supreme Court and that means the full court comprising the five judges. And the principal order was that Sir Michael Somare should be reinstated forthwith and Peter O'Neill should also vacate the Office he was holding illegally. However, Parliament responded by passing a law that said the events of 2/8/11 were legal and not illegal. And in case there was any doubt, they re-elected O'Neill as the PM.

The new law passed by parliament is of doubtful legal effect, in that again the constitution may have been violated in parts, because parliament cannot pass an ordinary legislation to have the effect of a constitutional amendment. In order to amend the constitution, parliament must pass a law called a constitutional amendment by following the procedures set down in the constitution. However, it would appear that the Somare camp is not taking the matter back to the Courts because the situation now is that the O'Neill government does not intend to give up power that easily and will do anything and everything under the sun to remain in power.

And what is the driving force behind this political and legal turmoil in this country.

Behind all this political crises is the politician's desire to wield power over others, accessing the National Treasury for funds to conduct their election campaign for next year, and the perks of office.

Yes, the O'Neill government dished out K500 million in 90 days after taking Office but we do not have any information on the recipients and what that vast sum of money was for. And they continue to hand out large sums of money and that leaves people wondering if it all boils down to a money-game waged by both sides.

Whatever the political game is, we must not lose sight of the fact that we have a written constitution which provides the framework within which the game of politics must be played. And then we have the judges who must play the role of a referee to ensure that the game follows the rules.

In that sense, we insist that the judiciary must not be attacked publicly for that role it has to play under the constitution.

Above all, the constitution must be respected.

If you want to change the constitution, then you must follow the procedures set down in the constitution to amend the constitution.

All governments must respect the constitution and all constitutional office holders.
