Goodbye 2012, Welcome 2013

WHAT a year, 2012 has been.

The excitement commenced with our friend Belden Namah walking into a Parliamentary Session on the 2nd day of August, 2011. After suspension of Standing Orders he moved a Motion whereby the Parliament declared that there was a vacancy in the Office of the Prime Minister, whilst the incumbent, Sir Michael Somare was overseas getting medical treatment.

Then by the same motion, Peter O'Neill was nominated as the candidate to fill that vacancy followed by a vote of a total of 73-76 MPs voting in favour, thus making O'Neill prime minister. So there was the stage built within less than hour from which a long and protracted legal battle was fought.

The Somare mob went to the Supreme Court and challenged the legality of the Motion by Namah and after 4 to 5 months into December, 2011, the Supreme Court handed down its decision declaring the Motion unconstitutional, in which case Sir Michael was restored as the lawful PM.

For about a week Sir Michael and his mob moved into the PM's Office at the Morauta House at Waigani and tried to conduct business there, but the civil servants would not co-operate; not because they took sides, but such indecision was largely due to the fact that things were happening too fast.

Namah's group of MPs mustered their numbers and by bus loads of MPs and supporters alike drove to the Morauta House singing: "We Shall Not Be Moved". It appears that when they reached Morauta House, they found out that Sir Michael and his mob had already deserted the place. Thus, the O'Neill mob settled in unopposed.

Had things been left at that as above, one wonders if the turn of events would have been otherwise than that which took place in terms of the confrontation with the Judiciary.

Not content with their "victory", the Namah mob moved to amend the NEC Act ensuring that there be deemed a vacancy in the Office of the PM under situations such as that faced by Sir Michael, and then they attempted a withdrawal of the original leave of absence given Somare by Parliament, thus ensuring that he would be deemed to have missed three consecutive sittings of parliament. That meant a further vacancy in the East Sepik Regional Seat which he has owned since time began.

And whilst Namah and O'Neill were busy passing these laws, the Somare mob were busy with their contempt proceedings against them. Some of these contempt proceedings were instigated by the Registrar of the Supreme Court.

The reaction by the Namah/O'Neill mob was to move a number of Motions before the Supreme Court to oust the Chief Justice, Salamo Injia, from presiding in these Supreme Court proceedings on the grounds of perceived bias.

It was not entirely clear then how they came up with that argument about bias. It appeared that they were apprehensive about the Chief Justice knowing that he would not be persuaded by political considerations. The Chief Justice refused to step down, and as a consequence of that, was charged with "perverting the cause of justice" for his part in refusing to recognize Judge's Hinchcliff's Associate as a "son" who should inherit the Judge's funds upon the Judge's death.

Then the O'Neill mob followed up with the Judicial Conduct Act in a further attempt to oust Judge Kirriwon and again the Chief Justice. The Somare mob jumped in and brought Supreme Court proceedings seeking to nullify the various laws passed as unconstitutional. Even before that the O'Neill mob had filed a Supreme Court Reference seeking a declaration that all their laws were constitutional.

What a stupid thing to do! Obviously, the lawyers acting for the O'Neill mob did not advise O'Neill that having muddied the "judicial waters" O'Neill would be the first one to muddy himself if he went for a dip. It turned out that the Supreme Court determined that the O'Neill Government was an "illegitimate" government thus making another attempt to slot in Somare as the lawful Prime Minister.

We were then into April/May, 1012 and the Writs were then issued. For some people, what a relief it was that the national election was at then at hand to divert the politicians' attention to something closer at home where they had to seek further mandates from their constituents. With this in mind, Namah was the first to propose that the elections be deferred by six months to allow the Electoral Commission [EC] to prepare itself for the task. Namah's argument was that the EC was ill-prepared.

There was even pressure from Australia not to defer the national elections. One can guess that the Australians may have communicated their apprehension about deferment to O'Neill because O'Neill insisted from the beginning that there will not be any extension of time for the elections. Even Andrew Trawen, the Electoral Commissioner insisted that the EC was ready to conduct the elections and that there were no pressing reasons for any delay. So we saw the elections come and go, and now we have the new parliament with the new government still headed by O'Neill.

For the record, what can we credit Peter O'Neill with since his taking Office?

One can see that in such a short time, Peter O'Neill has accomplished a lot; a lot more than those PMs who had held that office for some longer periods at a time.

Even after taking Office illegally, he promised free education and he delivered largely free education.

He won the hearts and minds of parents who had to struggle to save up for school fees. And people from the Department of Education who were slow to release moneys for the schools early this year found themselves booted out of their offices and the message that Peter O'Neill is a very serious fellow started to sink in.

Then Peter O'Neill took to heart the cries of irate parents about the backward OBE system and then declared war on it, with the demand that by the commencement of the 2013 School Year, the old OBE must go and the old system that did work in the past, be reintroduced. We applaud O'Neill for his stand on OBE.

The essence of the OBE system, was that it made teachers lazy, and their students and their parents had to work extra hard to make the grades without teacher-assistance, and without resources like text books. It was a flop; a system that had gone belly up 20 years ago.

Just imagine teaching elementary school children tokples. Who the hell came up with that stupidity when it is English that these kids must master if they are to advance in their future school years and well into their future career.

Our advice to O'Neill is to kick more asses if the Education Department is slow on implementation of the new education system for the year 2013.

And now we are into Christmas and New Year 2013 is less than 2 weeks away.

And what can we remember this year for? A fair number of important things one would say. First and foremost is that O'Neill orchestrated himself back into power and managed to form a government of reconciliation to shut out the likes of Sir Michael returning with their "kitchen cabinet" to further mismanage the country's resources.

At that superficial level you will find many happy Papua New Guineans who are pleased to see Sir Michael go because his presence was being used by a handful of politicians to enrich themselves at the expense of the people and the country at large.

In a sense it appeared as if Sir Michael was building an oligarchy; a state of governing in which power vests in a handful of people. Sir Michael lost his vision for PNG soon after independence and the journey that lasted 38 years was a period of degeneration and collapse of law and order, the country's infrastructure and the whole education system.

Yes, Sir Michael will probably boast about his role in the oil and gas industry, but we have yet to see what the benefits to PNG will be.

For a start the people will soon find out what will happen to their LNG money after they find out that the LNG Dividends have been diverted to various Swiss bank Accounts to "service" the $US 2 billion loan from Dubai.

Strangely, the 22% equity in LNG is still held by a company registered under the Companies Act, and we are told that there is no Deed of Trust to say that the shares are held in trust for the State and the landowners.

And whatever happened to the Somare mob's Community Colleges system, for which a sum of K100 million was allocated. The recent move by the O'Neill government to stop Greg Sheppard's return trip to PNG is alleged to be associated with the issue of K50 million sitting in his firm's Trust Account. And we are told that there is another cool $US 50 million sitting in a PNG private family account in a Singapore-based Bank.

There are PNG Contractors throughout the country waiting for the money to be released so that they can commence construction works on the

Community Colleges Projects which projects they had won after competitive bidding.

Unfortunately for these contractors, we are further told that the funds had been released but disappeared between Port Moresby and the local Treasury Offices in the Provinces.

And then there are these massive payments made by the National Gaming Board to various individuals connected with various politicians in the Somare Government.

The rumour now is that some K100 million of Gaming Board Funds disappeared into private bank accounts of individuals and companies associated with politicians in the previous Somare administration. One such group of companies collected some cool K43 million. Query: Will the Gaming Board go after these guys and their companies to recoup all that money? If not, why not?

With that, let us now look ahead and see what is likely to happen in the coming year 2013.

If the Mayan Calendar is to be believed, then we may not reach that far. According to what has been recorded by this Central American Civilization, the world is to experience a polar shift on December 23, 2012, whereby the world would be thrown into total darkness for lack of electricity and all electronic implements will fail to respond thus creating chaos everywhere. Another Domsday Message?

Talking about Domsday Messages, what is this about Mr 666 now making his presence in the world at large? Just because there are people in South America planting micro chips in their bodies to access certain restricted offices, does that mean that the world is now nearing that event foretold in the Book of Revelation by John the Apostle?

One of the problems the world has had to deal with for the last 2,000 years is the onslaught by Bible bashers who go around their communities preaching about doomsday as foretold in Revelation. But let us ask if the Book of Revelation is written in the everyday language for general consumption and this is where one may have to think twice about what the Book of Revelation is about.

Firstly, John the Apostle was in the spirit when he saw his vi-mon belief among those who have studied Revelation is that it is written in a form of a code that seeks to describe the journey by which man descends to earth in the material body and then must transcend the world in which he finds himself to free that deific atom to make that return journey back to its Divine Source.

Thus, it is said that the trials and tribulations foretold in Revelation are synonymous with the trials and tribulations next year is all about infrastructure development.

Peter O'Neill does not waste his breath talking too much. But when he directs anything to be done, he is noted for keeping notes of what he has commanded and follows up on people who are to implement his directions.

For instance, if you have followed the lack of implementation of school subsidies for our schools in the second half of this year you would know that considerations of merit.

The Public Service bureaucrats tell us that their selection of the top people in the service is aligned to the merit based system in their books but there is no evidence to date to support that theory. Most of our Departmental Heads have had no experience in the private sector so to start with they do not have the necessary "work culture" whereby the key element is "production" so that you must not only put your hours of work but you must also produce results. These days there is no point in writing to a government department because you will never get a reply. Or better still try calling a government department using the telephone numbers from the annual telephone directory; you may be lucky if someone answers your phone. Worse still, you will be given about half a dozen phone numbers and in the process you will give up and front up in person at the department only to be told that the officer did not report to work.

Thus, if this government intends to change the way nothing ever gets done here, the public service needs a major revolution. The starting point would be to bring in foreigners as divisional heads and supervisors to ensure that things get done and done on time. People must report to work on time and work late if they have to in order to produce results.

Presently, our own people who ought to run our various departments and other government agencies do not command the respect of their subordinates. Firstly, these Heads of Departments and other Agencies are hardly at work from 8am to 4pm. They will present themselves at work in the morning but disappear before lunch and may front up again at 3pm to check if nothing extraordinary has happened like their offices burning down or the old misus turning up and picking up a fight with the boss's favourite dolly-dolly in the Office.

Thus, we must now ask Dr Puka Temu, the Minister for Public Service: Well, how do you intend to tackle this problem? One thing for sure: Localization has failed to deliver. Bring the foreigner into the civil service work force.

"Most of our Departmental Heads have had no experience in the private sector so to start with they do not have the necessary "work culture" whereby the key element is "production" so that you must not only put your hours of work but you must also produce results".

sion and subsequently it was written down as a fair record of what he saw. We can also assume that when he recorded his vision, he was still in the spirit. Thus, if we are to read that record and if we are to grasp what its true meaning is, it is true to say we must also be in the spirit to understand what the Book of Revelation is about.

The second problem with understanding the Book of Revelation is that the original text must have been written in the Hebrew Language of the Jewish people.

And people who have studied this language say that the Jewish alphabet is divided into two groups, namely, the male characters and the female characters, and that each such character also carries a numerical value so that in order to arrive at a possible meaning or a series of meanings in respect of each character and its positioning or arrangement in a given combination, one must delve into identifying the significance of each character plus the numerical value for which that character stands. We are told that it is more like doing the crossword puzzle.

Given the above, it is not all that easy to give the Book of Revelation a literal interpretation of what John the Apostle saw in his vision. One com-that the deific atom in Man must undergo in order to free itself from the material encasement in which it must find itself whilst on this material plane. Sounds interesting, and also plausible but where do we start? Definitely, not with the present batch of Bible bashers we have in the world.

Now getting back to something more tangible in this material world, let us ask what Peter O'Neill has in stock for the year 2013. There is a lot of talk about implementation of government policies especially by way of restoring our decaying infrastructure and building new ones to open up the country and take it one step at a time into the modern world. Thus, in line with that policy, the former Department of Works is now called the "Department of Works and Implementation".

It is said by our bureaucrats that the O'Neill Government has selected two pilot projects to experiment with his concept of infrastructure development or impact project development. They are firstly the rehabilitation of the Highlands Highway and the Proposal for construction of a Major Highway linking the Oil and Gas Fields in the Highlands with the Kikori Malalaua Highway to finally linking Port Moresby. It is not surprising that a major portion of the K13 billion budget for some heads were rolling in the education hierarchy when the next batch of school subsidies did not get released on time, even though the appropriate funds were held in Trust Accounts managed by the Education Agencies concerned.

This is what we want. We want a Prime Minister who gives directions and kicks asses because all throughout the last 38 years since Independence, the government would give directions to the public service machinery to implement the directions, but the machinery would not move and there is no follow up action by the government.

This brings us to the question of competency on the part of the public service machinery to translate government policies into workable projects for purposes of implementation. If we go by past record, the machinery has not performed at all. The public service machinery is far too large, cumbersome, and there is no central point for purposes of co-ordination and supervision. Most of our Departmental Heads are career public servants who made their way up the ladder through the Clerk Class System. What the system looks at for purposes of promotion is the number of years spent in the service and from there one is promoted almost as a matter of course irrespective of eagle, half lion) if it hadn't been for valiant Lancelot, who bravely attached it and got them safely away. Learning Lancelot's life noblemen may apply magically forges proof of nobility. Lancelot passes hazing and close combat tests against prince Arthur, but is found out as commoner and jailed. When the griffin attacks Camelot, even inside the royal castle, the knights' arms prove unable to penetrate the monster. Arthur frees Lancelot, and magically helps him triumph where all knighthood fails miserably, but will Uthur hear Author's plea to allow the best sword to serve in chivalry against his law.

Merlin would have been killed by a giant griffin (Half
