PNG'S First Heart Artery Stent done at PIH

A patient from Port Moresby who had several arterial blockages in his heart underwent a first and successful multi-stent procedure known as Coronary Stenting or angioplasty, in PNG's first and only Cath lab at the new Pacific International Hospital (PIH) last month, by Dr Richard Chan who is a visiting interventional cardiologist from Cairns at PIH.

Another patient a mother of three, Boio Toua from Hanuabada said she was referred to PIH by her heart specialist at the POM General Hospital. Toua said she was having symptoms of Coronary Heart Disease including feeling heaviness and pressure and pain in her chest and shortness of breath.

After a few tests which included an ultrasound video looking at heart strength and valve function called an Echocardiogram, a blood test to check the Troponin level, which can indicate a recent heart attack, ECG which is an electricity recording of the heart and an Exercise Stress Test which - detects hearts condition while patient walks on a treadmill.

The hospital also treated a General Practitioner, Dr. Ray Lakani who was mightily impressed by the procedure, service and facilities.

"I was told I may have blockages based on an ECG and stress level test so I underwent an angiogram which thankfully turned out to be normal with no significant blockage and was negative; that was very relieving," he said.

Lakani said managing five clinics for New Britain Palm Oil (NBPOL) and based in Alotau, considering such treatment at Public Hospitals was not possible and with overseas treatment there was the high cost factor.

"Getting the angiogram done here at PIH in Moresby was very efficient because I live in Alotau and to go to Australia it would have cost 90 to 100 thousand Kina if I needed an angioplasty, while here it cost a fraction of that", he said.

Heart disease is very common in Boio Toua holding a packets of her prescribed medicine for the heart.

Dr. Richard Chan Interventional Cardiologist talking at the last CME seminar at PIH earlier this year.

Dr. OP Sharma, Boio Toua na Emmanuel Fabila i toktok long FM100 Tokbek so long las mun.

PNG with many people dying of Heart Attacks occurring when a blockage in the arteries slows or stops the blood flow to the heart muscle. This blockage is caused by fatty build-up, smoking, high blood pressure, high cholesterol levels, diabetes and aging.

Ms Toua said she is happy that she was introduced to the new tests available at PIH cath lab and could have the procedures done here at home. She was informed that her blockages were around 80 and 90 percent.

She is now taking her time and being more cautious before she receives open heart surgery. "I know so much more now that if my heart stops I am gone", Toua said.

Lakani is back to work and although he does not have blockages he was advised to keep his risk factors low to prevent progression of his heart disease. Exercise and eating right are important.

Toua and Lakani both underwent a coronary angiogram which is the gold standard and final say of heart tests to detect blockage in arteries, wherein a catheter (thin tube) is passed up the blood vessel in the arm or groin all the way to the heart and a special dye is injected

X-ray pictures are taken in real time and the dye shows any blockages in the heart arteries and help the doctor decide what treatment is required such as medicine, stents to open the artery right away or refer for open heart bypass surgery to the cardiac surgeon.

Coronary Angioplasty is done in a similar manner in the cath lab usually in the same session as the angiogram if there is blockage and is a treatment rather than a test, where a balloon is pushed over the catheter into the blockage and inflated, pushing the blockage open from within.

Stents are small metal springs inserted in the artery so that when the "balloon" is removed they open up like an umbrella to hold the artery open and maintain the blood flow to the heart muscle..

This surgery is called non-invasive as patient's chest is not opened up by surgeons and can patient is usually able to go home the very next day .Not all cases can be treated with angioplasty however and there are a few indicators that will require the patient to undergo bypass surgery including a blockage in main left heart artery, blockage at the origin of the heart artery), multiple blockages in one or more arteries, a calcified heart artery or when any artery is 100 percent blocked over a period of time.

Dr Lakani said that in PNG lifestyle diseases such as those to do with the heart must be taken seriously as the financial costs and consequences are high.

For better long term results doctors prefer bypass surgery but angioplasty is best suited for younger patients.

Surgery is now more bearable with new anaesthetics and can now be performed on beating heart as opposed to older methods where the heart was arrested during surgery.

This method allows for early recovery, early discharge and less neurological, kidney and lung complications as well as less blood and blood product requirements which provides better patient compliance and good long term results.

An article was published in the International Cardiac Surgery Journal in support of this by PIH Chief Cardio-thoracic and Vascular Surgeon and Medical Director, Dr. Omprakash (OP) Sharma, who is also a pioneer in such surgical procedures.

After insertion of stents, patients walked out with healthy hearts the next day after a handshake with their doctor. Hopefully, more Papua New Guineans will be saved by Coronary Stenting in the near future. Dr. Richard Chan visits PIH fortnight, while Dr Sharma and his cardiac surgery team are based full-time in Port Moresby at PIH.

Tau requests the public to be aware of their heart symptoms as early diagnosis can save your life and that she may be holding a medical fundraiser soon for her surgery and for further information her brother Rei can be contacted on 72395929.
